US multi-manager platform Hurricane Capital has plans to launch an office in London.

It is understood that senior members of the firm's management team have recently travelled to London to discuss the buildout with service providers in the UK capital and are in talks with the Financial Conduct Authority.

The New York-headquartered hedge fund incorporated a company in the United Kingdom in recent weeks, UK Companies House filings show.

Hurricane Capital declined to comment.

With Intelligence has recently reported that Hurricane had backed two startups from Millennium vets.

Chris Hammond is planning to re-launch of healthcare-focused Jaguar Capital after a stint at Walleye and Tolu Bukola is launching Aganju Capital which will focus on litigation, events corporate actions, and deep value positions.

Hurricane had assets under management of just under $500m at the end of 2023, SEC filings show.

Hurricane is structured to give flexibility to its investors and the firm as they can choose how they allocate to underlying portfolio managers who all run independent firms with money exclusively from Hurricane.

Portfolio managers may run capital for one or more of Hurricane's funds or one of the firm's investors if it chooses to allocate.
